

The IT Department Explanation.

A quick breakdown

Hello there! We are The IT Department. Here are reasons why WE should become the staff team of NTDEV's server.

We have a lot of experiences in moderation, and we do not abuse our powers. We try to keep the server tidy and clean of rule-breakers, and we are not strict with other people.

Now, let's take a look at our members.

Staff Team Introduction

Administrators

- MishaProductions

I have been an administrator and moderator on at least 5 discord servers. I am currently an administrator in a 200+ member server. I have experience with creating discord servers, writing discord bots, 3+ years of experience in C#.

- omame

I have been a moderator on The Flying Tech since 2020. I have experience moderating servers, administering servers, and bot development in Python and TypeScript.

- Neptune5111

I was previously an administrator of the server. I moderate many servers such as Operating System Enthusiasts, which has over 300 members, and Windows Expert - almost 100 members. I also have good moderation knowledge and I also have some discord python bot and web development knowledge.

- FireCube

I am a cube on fire. I have three years of experience in holding various positions of management powers in a multitude of servers and one subreddit. I am the owner of Fluent Design server (425 members), owner of Windows Mobile server (115 members) and owner of Microsoft leaks server. I have experience with various democratic systems in Discord servers. I also have experience with invading servers under command of a commander. In addition to that, I am a developer with experience in development and some discord bot development. I also like to call the entire The IT Department Inc bad.

- RealEngineH

I have been a moderator on previous servers. I also have my server, and I know all the ins and outs of moderating servers. Plus I have moderated this server before so I definitely know what I'm doing.

Moderators

- tree

I had some previous experiences in moderation, currently moderating a 316 members community server and a couple of other servers, for example, the Windows Expert community.

- PatRyk

I am currently moderating a Discord server with about 800 members (It's called The Blue Muffin.) It's not very active though, however I have been in tough situations like raids etc. I sadly don't have any programming knowledge.

- ivan123

I was previously a moderator on the NTDEV's Server and used to moderate the Client++ server. I have experience in setting up bots, and I have some moderation knowledge.

- KittyLe

I was previously a moderator on Enderman's Network (2 years), currently moderating a few servers. Have experience in programming in TypeScript.

- Zeealeid

I owned a Discord server for around ten months. I won the presidency three times on a democratic server (Developer Sanctuary). I maintained peace in the server, and the server saw significant growth during my term.

Why do we want to be staff?

We make sure we provide the freedom of speech that needs to be provided.

We aren't too strict, but at the same time we keep an eye on the server.

As mentioned in the introduction, we all had past experiences in moderation.

We also try our best to prevent drama and toxicity, we respect your opinions and ideas.

We make sure every action we take will be permitted by the server owner himself, because that is basically the whole point of being a part of the staff team.

The server members' opinions are why we are a part of the staff team, we make sure to give every single opinion the amount of attention it deserves, you can share all your creations and ideas whenever you like on how to improve the server.

Conclusion

The IT Department is an ideal replacement of current staff because

1. We are not that strict.
2. We actually do something instead of doing nothing.
3. We all had past experiences in moderation.
4. Most of us are active on NTDEV's Server
5. We all care about your opinions and ideas.
6. Abusing our power isn't part of our job, all our actions will be approved by the owner.
7. We are not idiots and dictators unlike the current staff team
